

POST TRIP

This faith-forming experience has intentionally emphasized the following values for your students to continue focusing on after returning home to further develop faith for life:

- The Gospel Message
- Worship
- God's Word
- Seeing a Broken World in Need
- Serving Others
- Intergenerational Relationships

Coming home from something like this can be a spiritual high, or it can be a bit disorienting. Students will have experienced much, seen much and shared much together, so coming back to real life can be a letdown.

That is why follow-up is essential. It is simply not enough to get them ready to go, raise the funds and then have a wonderful experience. Your job as a youth leader isn't finished until the follow-up is complete.

With the right planning, you can enlist the church and the adults who supported the trip to participate in the follow-up as well. You can equip them with the post-trip questions so they can help students process their experience and integrate what they've learned into their daily life.

BEFORE YOU LEAVE FOR YOUR TRIP:

Equip your church to be Sending Partners and Follow-Up Partners. Almost every youth group going on a trip asks that adults support them with prayer and finances. Prepare an announcement or bulletin insert for while you're gone that will prepare the adults in the church for post-trip follow-up.

Ask your pastor, or whoever can represent you while you're gone, to make an announcement. You might use words like: "As a church, we've made a commitment to pray for and encourage the students who are gone. Let's ask God to increase their level of thankfulness, generosity, prayer and passion for missions. Let's ask that God would grant them each an understanding of their personal strengths and gifts as well as the ability to deal with issues in their own walk with Christ.

"When these students get back, let's not ask them: 'How was your trip? Did you have fun?' or 'What did you do?' Instead, try questions like: 'What is something you will miss from your trip? What did this experience make you more thankful for? Whom did you serve, and what impact did they have on you? What is your best memory of the trip? What is one thing God did in your life this week? What was the funniest situation? Who is going to help keep you accountable for your continued growth?'"

You can even consider putting a list of suggested questions in the bulletin on Sunday morning to give people ideas of constructive questions to ask the students.

DEBRIEFING ON THE WAY HOME:

As an adult leader, you have a great opportunity to find out what the students are thinking and how they feel about the experience and their lives after the experience.

After a trip like this it's good to ask, "What's next?"

The first step is to understand what you think and how you feel about this experience, focusing on the people you learned from, those you served with and the principles God taught you. Hopefully you learned a lot about yourself and understand better how God is working. A good post-trip plan will include:

- Debriefing: what I think and how I feel about what just happened
- Follow-up: what I need to focus on for the next 21 days to continue what is happening
- Follow-through: what character traits do I want to keep so that this trip becomes a significant part of my life journey

In order to take what you've learned and work it into your everyday life, you'll have to share those thoughts with people at home and stay connected to your church. This short trip will become a great part of your life journey if you keep working on what you've learned.

By the time you get home, you'll want to be ready to share one story about how the week impacted your life. When people at home ask, "What did you do?" they often really mean, "Whom did you serve, and how did the week impact your life?" Be ready to answer those questions. Here are a few other questions to answer with your team.

You can actually write these down and cut the phrases apart. On the way home, you can put them in a hat, and ask a student to grab a piece of paper and answer the question to open up the discussion.

- What are the top three things I will miss from my experience?
- What are the top three things I'm most thankful for at home?
- What is one thing I have to remember?
- What did God communicate to me?
- What was the funniest situation?
- Who will I share with when I get home so I can be held accountable for continuing this growth?

10 ADDITIONAL QUESTIONS TO HAVE ANSWERS FOR:

1. Who helped send you on this trip, and how will you share with them the impact the experience has had on you?
Specifically remember that there were:
 - People praying for you.
 - People who gave money toward your trip.
 - People who took care of your responsibilities while you were gone.These people are called "Sending Supporters," and they will want to hear about the impact of the trip on your life and on the lives of the people you served. They might ask you, "What did you do?" But what they really want you to answer is, "How did this trip touch your life and the lives of the people you served?"
2. What did you learn from the people in the community this week?
3. What surprised you this week? What disappointed you? How did that impact your week?
4. Who/what do you specifically want to pray for when you get home?
5. When you think of this trip, what is one specific snapshot that comes to mind?
6. How do you want your youth group to be involved in service and justice at home?
7. When you think about going home, what are you anxious about? What are you excited about?
8. What do you hope will change about your life as a result of this experience? Who can help you make those changes or hold you accountable for them?
9. How could/should your church change as a result of your team's experience?
10. How are you going to talk with others about this experience? If you were going to share a sixty-second version of this week, what would you say?

*NOTE: Some of these questions are adapted from Kara Powell and Brad Griffin, Deep Justice Journeys: 50 Activities to Move from Mission Trips to Missional Living (Grand Rapids: YS/Zondervan, 2009).*

FOLLOW UP – YOUR FIRST 21 DAYS:

1. Stay Connected with People:

It can be difficult to return from a trip and say goodbye to teammates who understand exactly what you are talking about in regards to the experience. Don't let this feeling take away your energy to apply all you learned to your everyday life. Service and discipleship belong in the everyday lives of Christ-followers.

2. Share with Your Sending Supporters:

Send a letter to anyone who helped you raise money for your trip and who prayed for you. Share about the people you served and what you learned. Ask them to keep praying for you through the next three weeks as you take what you've learned into your everyday life.

3. Have a Team Meeting:

Plan a follow-up meeting once you're home. Bring anything that might help you remember the commitments you made or what impacted you (e.g. a short note, a journal or a picture to remind yourself of a story or person).

Here are Some Things to Emphasize at Such a Meeting:

- Remembering what God has done. Focus on changed lives and not merely on the tasks accomplished. How did the work actually help the Host Church and the people/organizations receiving the work?
- What are you thankful for now that you're home?
- Praying for your team, those that hosted you and those you worked with/for.
- Sharing photos that were taken by different people on the trip.
- Journaling. If you kept a journal, refer to it so you remember all you did and learned. You could even share some of your entries in an email to your teammates and encourage them to share what they learned on the trip as well. Keep journaling.

4. Plan Some Next Steps as a Group:

- Continue to pray for those people who impacted your life: hosts, community members or church members.
- Create future goals based on what you learned about yourself and ask a leader or a friend to keep you accountable.
- Determine how to use your specific skills/gifts to serve in your church and community.
- Decide how you will increase prayer in your church for the community.
- Look for specific ministry opportunities similar to those you were involved with. Are there similar opportunities you can be involved with at home? Don't just assume that there is or isn't; do some research. If not, can your church start something to meet the need in your community?

5. Plan Some Next Steps Individually:

- What situation in my home life do I need to give up to God? Were things revealed during my trip that I can act on now?
- How can this experience enhance my service at church?
- What did I learn about the spiritual gifts I have been given, and how can I put these into action at home?
- What spiritual commitments or goals do I want to set for myself in the next month? In the next year?
- How will I do some research on local needs that I can help to meet?

Remember: if you are setting goals, ask God for direction and for wisdom. Don't set goals first and then ask him to bless them later. Goals should be SMART:

Specific Measurable Attainable Realistic Timely

IF YOU/YOUR GROUP IS GOING TO CONSIDER ANOTHER EXPERIENCE LIKE THIS:

Evaluate the Specific Experience:

- Are you interested in doing something similar again next year?
- What fundraisers, in addition to those done this year, would you suggest?
- List anything you would change.

POST-EXPERIENCE TEACHING LESSONS

Overview: After enjoying a cross-cultural missions experience, one might want to know how they can sustain faith decisions they made on his/her missions trip experience. The following guide will provide a 3-step process to continue new faith decisions.

LESSON 1, STEP 1: SEEK PEACE WITH GOD

>> Key Passage:

"Therefore, since we have been justified through faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Romans 5:1)

>> Talking points to consider:

- Before we come to Christ, we are separated from God because of our patterns of behavior.
- Before we had the idea to want to be one of God's children, God pursued us
- God's pursuit of us continues after our conversion
- God plans to finish the work in us that He started and that we witnessed while on SERVE

>> A Closer Look: Abram

At a critical time in Abram's life, while Abram wondered if he had failed God, God comforted and encouraged him.

>> Read Genesis 15:1-21

Abram did not have any children, therefore he suggested that his servant would need to carry on his legacy.

In the midst of his depression, sadness, anxiety, God asks him to prepare offerings according to an ancient ritual meant to express commitment to two parties in a treaty. God wants Abram to make a promise to Him; God in return promises Abram to be with him.

Abram and God developed peace with one another, a peace that endured until the end of Abram's journey.

Each of us are like Abram after we've experienced SERVE. We want to be committed to God, but we wonder if we have what it takes. The Good News is that God doesn't wait for us to get our act together before we seeks us.

Consider naming one area of your life that isn't in alignment with God's best for you: feelings of bitterness, guilt about a certain behavior, a secret you've kept from family and friends, etc.

Like Abram arranging animals before God at an altar, maybe we need to bring that thing between us and God into the light. That way, it can lose its power over our lives and God can do something about it. Consider sharing that issue with someone trustworthy so they can pray for you.

Ultimately, allow the peace of God to wash over you. He sought each of us before we were perfect. May that great love from God empower each of us to take our next faithful step forward.

LESSON 2, STEP 2:

PEACE WITH OTHERS

>> Key Passage:

“Make every effort to live in peace with everyone and to be holy; without holiness no one will see the Lord.” (Hebrews 12:14)

“For God was pleased to have all his fullness dwell in him, and through him to reconcile to himself all things, whether things on earth or things in heaven, by making peace through his blood, shed on the cross.” (Colossians 1:19-20)

>> Talking points to consider:

- Step 1 to build a sustaining faith is to seek peace with God, which is what the lesson was about last session.
- Step 2 is to look out into other human relationships that we have and seek to ask God to help us to restore those relationships.
- “Peace” is not the absence of conflict, but it is the settling after a conflict has happened.
- According to Colossians 1, the on-going work of Jesus is to reconcile all things, whether they are “in heaven” or “on earth.”
- Hebrews tells us that we must make “every effort” to live in peace with everyone.
- Our knowledge of having peace with God seems to be expressed in how we try to broker peace with other people.
- If Jesus is reconciling all things to himself, then we work with him as we do the same. If we tear relationships apart, we work against his continued work in the world.

>> A Closer Look: Abram

- Peace-making is a vital part of the Christian life, but it is a challenging task. We must be honest about hurt feelings without pointing too much guilt towards the people who may have hurt us.
- Peace-making takes time. Think about the first, reasonable step towards repair and trust that God will open opportunities for lasting repair.
- Perhaps the first relationships you should seek to repair is within your family.

LESSON 3, STEP 3: MAKE A GRAND GESTURE

>> Key Passage:

“Joseph, a Levite from Cyprus, whom the apostles called Barnabas (which means ‘son of encouragement’), sold a field he owned and brought the money and put it at the apostle’s feet.” (Acts 4:36-37)

“Show me your faith without deeds, and I will show you my faith by my deeds.” (James 2:18)

>> Talking points to consider:

- The pattern of the Christian life is to “believe” and to “obey.” Jesus regularly sought those who were far from God and he asked them to learn to live in the abundant life now.
- A common command in the New Testament is to “repent,” the change one’s mind about meaningful areas of life.
- To take deliberate steps in the faith is to declare allegiance to Jesus and to reject other ways of life.

>> A Deeper Look: Barnabas

- In Acts, as the church grew in number, new leaders emerged to help discern the way of Jesus
- Barnabas showed his commitment to the church by making a grand gesture
- Others gave impressive sermons, or could perform miracles. Barnabas sought to meet the tangible needs of others in the church through his generosity

>> Grand Gestures

- Some of us might have a difficult time figuring out what a grand gesture. I mean, we aren’t like Barnabas who had something costly like a field to sell in order to give money to the church.
- Consider these things for a grand gesture:
 - Is there a person at work or school who could use a generous and thoughtful gift?
 - Is there a lonely person in your church community who needs a visit on occasion?
 - Is there a pervasive need in your community that needs to be addressed?
- Christian people are “Good News People.” The watching world around us should be startled by our activity and should left with the impression that our presence is “Good News.” As a youth group, discuss ways you can be Good News in your town or city.
